

Remuneration Reports

March 2, 2015

Remuneration reports are an opportunity to communicate to shareholders how effectively the company manages executive and director remuneration, and the benefits to shareholders of the company's approach. In addition, a large number of Australian public companies fail to comply with remuneration disclosure requirements. The review takes into account Corporations Act, AASB, and ASX requirements, as well as the need to communicate your company's remuneration rationale in plain English.
